

ANNOUNCING!

CONTRACTOR EDUCATION YOU CAN TAKE AT HOME

New online/DVD 12-credit course from the Wisconsin Builders Association®

The Wisconsin Builders Association® offers first-rate continuing education classes to Wisconsin builders and remodelers who want to stay current on Wisconsin's Uniform Dwelling Code changes and who need continuing education credits to earn or renew their Dwelling Contractor Qualifier Credential.

WBA's ONLINE/DVD VERSION OF "NEW BUILDER EDUCATION" IS READY!

On April 8 and 9, 2008 we recorded a live "New Builder Education" session in Madison, Wisconsin. We videotaped the presenters and captured the PowerPoint slide shows as the instructors moved through their presentations. We did this because we understand it may be difficult for builders and remodelers to be away from their businesses for a solid day and a half.

This online/DVD version makes it possible for you to complete the program on your own schedule without needing to travel.

APPROVED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

— It fulfills the need for the 12-credit
Initial Training Qualifier class

— It works for people who want 12 continuing education
credits for renewing their Dwelling Contractor Qualifier
Credential

THE PRESENTERS

Attorneys Carl Sinderbrand and Brian Mullins from the law firm of Axley Brynson, LLP speak from experience on contracts, warranties, liens, the new Right to Cure Law, and more. Presenter Devin Rains is the instructor for the codes and construction practices segment. He is an instructor in the Architectural Technician Program and Construction and Remodeling Program at Madison Area Technical College.

IT'S LIKE BEING AT THE LIVE TRAINING

You will feel as though you are attending a live session. But this is even better, because you can stop and start the training, and you can revisit segments as you complete your open-book examination.

YOU'LL GET A COMPLETE WORKBOOK

Your workbook contains all of the PowerPoint slides presented by the instructors. It also contains many legal documents that are essential for running a successful building or remodeling business.

IT'S EASY!

No software to install for either the online version or the DVD for most people with a recent Windows platform. Just go to the link or insert the DVD in your computer, and begin the training.

If you need to take the 120-question test, have your examination handy so you can answer questions as you listen. You must pass the test with a score of 70% or better.

Once you finish listening to all of the segments, send your completed examination to the Wisconsin Builders Association®. We'll grade it and return an Education Affidavit that you can send to the Department of Commerce with your application for the Dwelling Contractor Qualifier Credential.

"New Builder Education" Registration

Online or DVD version -- Your choice

Beginning January 1, 2008 contractors and remodelers need a new credential in order to pull building permits in Wisconsin – the Dwelling Contractor Qualifier Certification (DCQC). The Wisconsin Builders Association® (WBA) recorded its "New Builder Education" class, and that DVD/online version has been approved by the Department of Commerce for 12 credits. These credits can be used either to earn or renew the Dwelling Contractor Qualifier Credential.

WBA's "New Builder Education" class has three separate, but integrated four-hour segments. The first and third phases cover construction laws and business practices; the second phase covers building codes and construction practices. Three instructors present the material for the 1-1/2 day workshop.

Attorneys from Axley Brynson LLP speak from experience on contracts, warranties, liens, the new Right to Cure law, and more. They also describe the difference between an independent contractor and an employee—a gray area that's interpreted differently by several agencies. Due to Worker's Compensation, Unemployment Compensation, liability and more, contractors need to know the difference.

Instructor Devin Rains presents the codes and construction practices segment. Among other credentials, he is an instructor in the Architectural Technician Program and Construction and Remodeling Program at Madison Area Technical College. He is also a certified UDC construction and HVAC inspector. As code consultant to the Wisconsin Builders Association®, Rains has taught, reviewed and presented code throughout Wisconsin. He speaks from experience and clearly teaches the latest info you need to know.

Each phase concludes with an objective test. To get Initial Training credit, participants must achieve an average grade of 70 percent on a 40-question test for each of the three segments.

Sponsored by the Wisconsin Builders Association® and the WBA Foundation

Note: "New Builder" in the title may be misleading. Grandfathered credential holders may use these classes to earn continuing education credits to renew their qualifier credential.
